The Honorable Speaker of the Assembly
The Honorable President pro Tempore of the Senate
The Honorable Members of the Senate and the Assembly of the Legislature of California

Members of the Legislature:

Your Joint Legislative Audit Committee respectfully forwards the Auditor General's report on services to children and youth administered through state agencies in California.

The Auditor General found that over $5.5 billion of state and federal funds were spent on over 160 programs serving children and youth in 1977-78. Proposed state and federal expenditures for these programs prior to passage of the Jarvis-Gann Property Tax Initiative were more than $6.2 billion, representing an increase of approximately 12.5 percent over present year expenditures.

Programs serving children and youth are administered by 37 state entities, with at least seven departments having significant responsibilities in this area. Eligibility for children's and youth programs is governed by more than 25 separate categories related to financial tests, diagnostic conditions and specific target populations and by more than 35 different age designations. Services are delivered by over 20 different types of agencies at the local level.

The legislative fiscal committees may wish to explore the possibility of duplication of functions and of administrative costs which are avoidable through consolidation or termination.

The auditors are Joan S. Bissell, Supervising Auditor; Steven L. Schutte; Samuel D. Cochran; and Edwin H. Shepherd.

Respectfully submitted,

MIKE CULLEN
Chairman

SUMMARY

Funding of Children's and Youth Services

Over $5.5 billion of state and federal funds were spent on over 160 programs which provided services to children and youth administered through state agencies in California during 1977-78. Approximately $3.6 billion were state funds and approximately $2 billion were federal funds. Local governments and other public and private agencies also provided substantial amounts of funding for children's and youth services, but a full accounting of these sources of funds was beyond the scope of this review.

Proposed 1978-79 state and federal expenditures for children's and youth services were over $6.2 billion and represented an increase of approximately 12.5 percent over 1977-78 expenditures. This figure is based on proposed expenditures prior to passage of Proposition 13 (the Jarvis-Gann Property Tax Initiative). Due to the potential impact of the constitutional amendment on both the state budget and the availability of local resources to meet requirements for local matching of funds and/or fiscal maintenance of effort, it is presently difficult to project accurately actual funding for children's and youth services in 1978-79.

State Agency Responsibilities
for Children's and Youth Services

Services to children and youth are presently administered through seven principal state departments: the Department of Education and the Departments of Social Services, Health Services, Developmental Services, Mental Health, Youth Authority and Employment Development within the recently reorganized Health and Welfare Agency. Some type of direct or indirect services to children and youth are also administered by an additional 30 state agencies, departments, offices or commissions.

Characteristics of Children's and Youth Services

Types of services for children and youth reported with most frequency by state agencies in California include education, child care, nutrition, physical and mental health care, vocational training, delinquency prevention, drug and alcohol abuse/prevention, recreation, and a variety of diagnostic and screening, counseling, and information and referral services.

Eligibility for state-administered services to children and youth is governed by a large number of combinations of over 25 separate categories related to financial tests, diagnostic conditions and specific target populations and by over 35 different age designations. Many specific programs are provided on the basis of low-income or welfare status and/or to children and youth who are physically or mentally handicapped, developmentally disabled, mentally/emotionally disturbed, delinquent or educationally disadvantaged. Other services are provided to the general population or without specific eligibility criteria.

Services for children and youth are delivered by over 20 different types of agencies at the local level. Principal local delivery agencies include school districts; county offices of education; county welfare, health and mental health departments; city governments and agencies; local law enforcement agencies; Regional Centers for the Developmentally Disabled; and a variety of private agencies.

INTRODUCTION

In response to a resolution of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee, we are conducting a review of services to children and youth provided through state agencies in California. The study is being conducted under the authority vested in the Auditor General by Section 10527 et seq. of the Government Code.

This report is the first of a series of Auditor General reports on services to children and youth. It is intended to identify:

- The state agencies which currently provide services to children
- The cost and funding of each program serving children
- The stated goals of each program serving children.

Later reports will identify:

- Formal relationships which currently exist in the State for the purpose of coordination among the departments serving children
- Organizational, statutory and fiscal barriers to the provision of children's programs in California.

Scope and Methodology

The program information presented in this report was collected through a survey of state agencies. A standardized questionnaire was sent to 124 state agencies, departments, offices and commissions. The questionnaire is in Appendix B, and the units of State Government surveyed are listed in Appendix C.

Children and youth were defined as persons under 18 years of age. Agencies were requested to identify and provide information concerning each specific program serving children and youth. For programs which serve a broad target population including children and youth, agencies were asked to prorate expenditures (and numbers of individuals served) to reflect resources for children's services using an appropriate proration method.

Information about programs serving children and youth collected through the survey includes:

- State agency/department location
- Statutory authorization

- Program goals/objectives
- Expenditures for 1976-77, 1977-78 and 1978-79 (proposed)
- Sources of funding (e.g., General Fund, federal funds, local funds, other)
- Numbers of children served
- Types of services provided
- Eligibility criteria
- Local service delivery agency(ies).

A summary of overall findings from the survey is presented in the following section of the report. More comprehensive information concerning each program serving children and youth administered through state agencies is contained in the Inventory of Services to Children and Youth In Appendix A. The inventory is available upon request and should be read in conjunction with the overview to provide detailed data about the children's and youth services provided through state agencies in California.

Information presented in the report is generally that which was reported by state agencies in the study questionnaire. However, a number of procedures were undertaken to check completeness and accuracy of data:

- A variety of state documents and reports were reviewed to ensure that all identifiable children's and youth programs administered through state agencies were reported
- Expenditure data were cross-checked to eliminate duplicate reporting of funding by more than one state agency (e.g., when administrative responsibility for programs is shared or funds for programs are transferred from one agency to another)
- Program expenditures were verified for general consistency with information reported in the 1978-79 Governor's Budget
- For programs within the Health and Welfare Agency,* information concerning program location was confirmed through agency follow-ups and documents describing new department responsibilities.

Study Limitations

There are a number of limitations to this report resulting from the nature of data maintained by state agencies concerning children's and youth services, and the scope and methodology of the study. In particular, the validity of comparisons and aggregations which can be made using the reported information is limited by the following factors:

* Chapter 1252, Statutes of 1977 (SB 363) reorganized the Health and Welfare Agency effective July 1, 1978.

- Nonuniform definitions could be used by agencies in providing program information. For example, the definition of "services to children and youth" and of categories for classifying types of services and eligibility criteria may not have been used uniformly by all agencies
- Data reported by agencies may be imprecise. For example, reported program expenditures and numbers of children served may have been only estimates, as in the case of programs serving both children and adults for which proration methods were used to provide data
- For some programs, data concerning program characteristics (e.g., types of services, eligibility criteria, local delivery agency) did not conform to the classifications for children's and youth services established for the survey. As a result, some charts in the overview which are based on these classifications do not contain information from each of the programs reported, although each such program is included in the inventory contained in Appendix A

- The focus of the study was on services to children and youth administered and/or funded through state agencies in California. Agencies were requested to report all state agency expenditures for such programs, but no attempt was made to determine total local agency funding for the programs. A review of questionnaire responses indicated that funding which does not flow through state agencies generally was not reported or was only partially reported. As a result, this report should be used in conjunction with other recent reports which provide information concerning local government funding for human services in order to provide a more comprehensive overview of publicly funded services for children and youth in the State*

- The review did not include information about projects funded directly by the Federal Government which are not administered through state agencies. In addition, it did not include an accounting of services supported through private funding sources such as foundations, charities and a variety of voluntary agencies at the local level.

* See, for example: The Impact of Proposition 13 (the Jarvis-Gann Property Tax Initiative) on Local Government Programs and Services, Sacramento, California: Assembly Committees on Local Government and Revenue Taxation, May 1978; An Analysis of Proposition 13, The Jarvis-Gann Property Tax Initiative, Sacramento, California: Legislative Analyst, May 1978; and Impact of Proposition 13 on Public Education, Sacramento, California: Assembly Education Committee, May 1978.

OVERVIEW OF STUDY FINDINGS

Funding and Administration of Children's and Youth Services
Through State Agencies

Total reported state and federal expenditures for children's and youth services administered through state agencies in California were over $5.5 billion in 1977-78. Proposed expenditures reported by agencies for 1978-79 were over $6.2 billion prior to passage of Proposition 13, the Jarvis-Gann Property Tax Initiative (Table 1, page 11).

In 1977-78, approximately $3.6 billion of expenditures for children's and youth services were state funds and over $1.9 billion were federal funds. Proposed 1978-79 General Funds were slightly over $4 billion and federal funds were somewhat over $2 billion (Table 1). The increase in support from these two sources would represent an increment of approximately 12.5 percent in funding for services to children and youth in the State. General Fund expenditures reported for services to children and youth represent approximately 30 percent of total state General Funds.*

* Total General Fund expenditures were estimated at approximately $12.1 billion in 1977-78 and proposed at approximately $13.5 billion for 1978-79.

Principal administrative and funding responsibilities for children's and youth services in California are located within the Department of Education and six departments within the Health and Welfare Agency.

The Department of Education reported 33 programs serving children and youth with estimated expenditures of $3.2 billion in 1977-78 and proposed expenditures of over $3.6 billion for 1978-79. This represents approximately 54 percent of proposed expenditures reported for children's and youth programs in the State and 73 percent of General Fund expenditures for such programs (Figure 1, page 14). Over 82 percent of reported funds for children's and youth services administered by the Department of Education are state General Funds and approximately 17 percent are federal funds.

The six major departments within the newly reorganized Health and Welfare Agency providing children's and youth services are the Departments of: (a) Social Services, (b) Health Services, (c) Developmental Services, (d) Mental Health, (e) Youth Authority* and (f) Employment Development (Table 2, page 15). These departments have administrative responsibility for more than 58 programs serving children and youth. Total expenditures within the Agency for this population were approximately $2.7 billion in 1977-78 and were proposed

* Chapter 1252, Statutes of 1978 (SB 363), expresses the intent of the Legislature that the Governor prepare and submit to the Legislature by January 31, 1979 an executive reorganization plan which would remove the Department of Youth Authority (and the Department of Corrections) from the Health and Welfare Agency, operative on or before July 1, 1979.

at nearly $3 billion for 1978-79 (Table 2, page 15). This represents 44.5 percent of proposed funding through state agencies for children's and youth services in California and 26 percent of General Fund expenditures (Figure 1). Over one-half of the Agency's reported expenditures are from federal funds and more than one-third from state General Funds.*

Programs providing direct or indirect services to children and youth are administered and/or funded by an additional 30 agencies, departments, offices or commissions in California. Other departments within the Health and Welfare Agency responsible for sizeable programs providing services to children and youth are the Departments of Alcohol and Drug Abuse and the Department of Rehabilitation. Additional state entities reporting a number of programs serving children and youth include the Department of Justice, the Department of Parks and Recreation, public institutions of higher education (e.g., the University of California), and the California Arts Council. Estimated expenditures reported by these and other additional state entities were approximately $107 million in 1977-78; proposed expenditures for 1978-79 were approximately $104 million (Table 1).

A full listing of all units of State Government reporting services to children and youth is contained in the inventory in Appendix A. It contains information for the more than 160 programs reported, including program title, agency/department location, goals/purposes, funding, types of services provided, eligibility criteria and local delivery agency(ies).

* Additional expenditures reflect reported local funds and other funds.

Types of Children's and Youth Services
Administered Through State Agencies

Programs for children and youth administered or funded through state agencies in California provide over 29 different types of services. Those reported with most frequency include education, child care, nutrition, physical and mental health care, vocational training, delinquency prevention, drug and alcohol abuse/prevention, recreation, and a variety of diagnosis and screening, counseling, and information and referral services (Figure 2, page 17).

Specific programs often provide more than one type of service, and it is difficult to determine accurately total funding amounts for each type of service. In addition, because individual programs vary in size ranging from those funded at a few thousand dollars to those funded at a hundred million dollars or more annually, numbers of programs alone cannot be used as a measure of the State's involvement in various different service areas.

Programs providing the same or related types of services are often administered by many different state agencies/departments in California as illustrated in Table 3 (page 18). For example, more than eight units of State Government were reported to have responsibilities for programs that included the following types of services: child care, vocational training, delinquency prevention and recreational services. As an illustration of the pattern of multiple state agency responsibilities for children's and youth services, the 12 state entities with some reported responsibility for child care services are listed in Table 4 on page 19.

Agencies may administer many separate programs, each of which provides the same or related types of services. For example, the Department of Education reported administrative responsibility for 24 separate educational programs serving individuals under 18 years of age.

Target Populations of Children and Youth Served Through State Agencies

Over 25 different categories related to financial tests, diagnostic conditions and specific target populations and more than 35 different age specifications govern eligibility for state-administered programs for children and youth. Numerous specific programs are provided on the basis of low-income or welfare status and/or to physically and mentally handicapped, developmentally disabled, mentally/emotionally disturbed, delinquent or educationally disadvantaged children and youth (Figure 3, page 22). Other services are provided to the general population or without specific eligibility criteria. Programs often provide services on the basis of more than one eligibility criterion, and it is difficult to identify exact amounts of funding for particular target populations.

Programs serving particular groups of children and youth are generally provided through a number of state agencies (Table 5, page 23). For example, six or more units of State Government reported responsibilities for services to physically handicapped, abused and neglected, and delinquent children and youth. As an illustration of this pattern of multiple state agency/department responsibilities, all those state entities with reported responsibilities for services to abused and neglected children are listed in Table 6.

Individual departments frequently have responsibility for numerous separate programs serving the same target population. Because administrative costs were not separately reported for all programs, we were unable to determine total state-level expenditures for administering the numerous separate programs serving children and youth in California. The reported administrative costs of over $36 million in 1977-78 represent only a portion of such expenses.

Local Delivery Agencies Through Which State Agencies Administer
Children's and Youth Services

Services to children and youth administered through state entities in California are delivered by over 20 different types of agencies at the local level. These local agencies include school districts; county offices of education; county welfare, health and mental health departments; city governments and agencies; county probation departments and local law enforcement agencies; Regional Centers for the Developmentally Disabled; and a variety of private agencies as shown in Figure 4 (page 25).

While state agencies may have principal contacts with certain types of local delivery agencies, they may also deal with numerous other agencies at the local level (Table 7, page 26). Thus, for example, the Departments of Education, Social Services and Health Services each reported administering programs through the following local agencies: school districts, county offices of education, county health, welfare and mental health departments, city governments and private agencies. Conversely, local agencies may deal with numerous state entities in providing children's and youth services. As an illustration of this pattern, the nine state entities that administer children's and youth services which may be delivered by county mental health departments are listed in Table 8 (page 27).

CONCLUSIONS

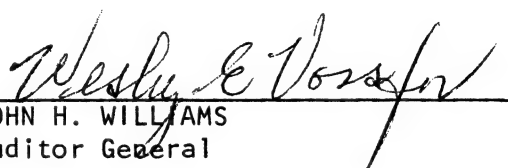

Services to children and youth are administered by multiple units of State Government in California, with at least seven departments having significant responsibilities for these services, and more than 160 programs providing them.

However, this represents only a portion of the delivery system for children's and youth services in California. Counties, cities and a variety of public and private agencies at the local level also have direct responsibilities for delivering a wide range of services to children and youth.

Many programs operated by these local agencies are funded directly through federal grants (e.g., Project Headstart), with matching or maintenance of effort funding frequently required for agencies to obtain such grants. Children's and youth services provided by local agencies are also supported by numerous sources of private funding such as foundations and charities. Additional sources of funding for many programs include service charges to users. Finally, local governments in California have historically financed a substantial array of programs for children and youth through local tax revenues.

The present report should be viewed in conjunction with data concerning services funded directly through the Federal Government and by public and private agencies at the local level to provide a complete description of the total delivery system for children's and youth services in California.* However, it represents a comprehensive compendium of the wide range of children's and youth services administered and/or funded through state agencies in California.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN H. WILLIAMS
Auditor General

Date: June 16, 1978

* The Office of Statewide Health Planning and Development in the newly reorganized Health and Welfare Agency is required by Chapter 1252, Statutes of 1977 (SB 363) to develop by July 1, 1980, a master plan for services to children and youth in California which is to include:

- A description of services and programs being provided to children and youth by public and private agencies
- A listing of potential public and private funding sources for development and expansion of services to children and youth.

AGENCY RESPONSE PROCEDURE

This is an informational report containing data concerning a large number of state agencies. The procedure of obtaining comments from individual agencies that is usually followed for Auditor General audits was not undertaken because it was deemed not to serve a useful purpose for this report.

APPENDIX A

INVENTORY OF SERVICES TO CHILDREN AND YOUTH ADMINISTERED THROUGH STATE AGENCIES IN CALIFORNIA

NOTES: Figures for total expenditures indicate reported amounts only. Actual program expenditures supported through all sources of funds may be greater than the funding administered through and reported by state agencies.

Several agencies did not attempt to report total local funding for programs they administer. Hence, reported figures of $0 local funds frequently indicate that local funding was not reported rather than that such funding was absent. Local funds that were reported may represent only a portion of such income.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

- Statutory authorizations are reported as cited by agencies rather than in standard legal terminology; agency citations were not verified.
- "Program goals/purposes" are based upon descriptions of individual programs and their goals/objectives provided by agencies.
- A variety of proration methods were used by agencies to estimate numbers of children and youth served and funding for services to them if programs also served adults. Proration methods are indicated in the explanatory comments if they were described by agencies.
- Administrative costs were not separately identified for many programs. When they were specified, amounts are designated in the explanatory comments.
- Transfers of funds between state agencies are indicated in parenthesis.
- Types of services, local service delivery agencies and eligibility criteria are described according to the categories used in the state agency questionnaire. "Other" is specified if the primary agency response or additional information provided by the agency did not conform to the questionnaire categories.
- No attempt was made to distinguish between those agency responses in which an income criterion for program eligibility was not specified and those for which either "No Income Criterion" or "Other" was the only response designated. "Income criteria: Not reported" is indicated for all three of these response categories.
- "Prioritized" data reflect responses by agencies in which multiple questionnaire categories were specified and priorities among them indicated.
- "Ages" reported reflect the age span specified by agencies even if the oldest age exceeded the defined age limit of 18 for children and youth.
- Some minor editing of responses was performed to improve the accuracy and consistency of information presented in the inventory listings.

Auditor General

SUBJECT: Children's and Youth Program Information

The Office of the Auditor General has been requested by the Joint Legislative Audit Committee to report program and expenditure information relating to services for children and youth in California. In order to provide this information, we will need your assistance.

Attached is a two-part questionnaire prepared for your use in reporting the needed information concerning agency functions and programs for children and youth.

Part I of the questionnaire asks each state agency/department to identify its principal functions related to children's and youth services and the principal functions of all relevant department units. Part I can be filled out at the agency/department level.

Part II of the questionnaire pertains to individual programs. Please duplicate it and this covering memorandum in the quantities required and distribute them as soon as possible to the appropriate units having responsibilities for each of your department's programs serving children and youth.

Office of the Auditor General

Memo to Directors,
California State Agencies/Departments
March 15, 1978
Page 2

For the purpose of uniformity, please note the following items:

- a. The terms "children" and "youth" mean persons under 18 years of age.
- b. Many state programs which serve people under 18 also serve people over 18. For the purpose of this study, if a program serves more than children, prorate the expenditures and the number of individuals served to reflect resources for children's services using an appropriate method, and include a brief statement under "explanatory comments" describing the method.
- c. Each specific program should be separately reported.
- d. Departmental administrative costs should also be included in the program expenditures reported. The percentage used in prorating for the program budget can be used; if another proration method is used, it should be described in "explanatory comments".

The questionnaire information will be computer processed. Therefore, please provide the data in the form requested.

Please return both Parts I and II of the completed questionnaires no later than April 15, 1978 to the Office of the Auditor General, 925 L Street, Suite 750, Sacramento, California 95814. If you have any questions, please contact Mr. Samuel Cochran at (916) 445-3078.
